The Work Within: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

You explain your credentials when someone questions a decision.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You agree too quickly because disagreement feels personal.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You ask for feedback, then search for reassurance.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You hide uncertainty rather than name what you need.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You can describe your intention but struggle to describe your response.

Choose one moment.

Notice when you ask for input and when you ask for reassurance. In one difficult conversation, name the feeling privately before deciding how to respond.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring a moment when feedback felt personal. We will use it to examine the work within. Save these questions.
