Grace: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

A disagreement becomes a judgment about your character.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You excuse a response because that is just how you are.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You expect improvement to remove every difficult feeling.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You apologize without deciding what to practice next.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You notice the same trigger after each conversation.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Choose one moment.

Write down what happened just before the response you regret. Choose one recurring trigger and prepare a response you want to practice when it appears.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring a response you want to handle differently. Start with what happened before it. Save these questions.