Message Received: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

You repeat the same wording when someone does not understand.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

A nod is treated as agreement about the next step.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Two people leave with different deadlines.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

People are embarrassed to ask for clarification.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You measure clarity by what you meant to say.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Choose one moment.

Compare the instruction you gave with the understanding the other person describes. Ask the other person to describe the next step in their own words, and invite them to question yours.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring an instruction that was understood differently. We will look at what was received. Save these questions.