Insult vs. Assessment: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

Feedback begins with always or never.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

A missed deadline becomes a judgment about character.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You cannot point to the behavior behind the label.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

The conversation ends without a next step.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Someone receives a judgment but no chance to respond.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Choose one moment.

Notice whether your feedback names behavior or defines the person. Describe one observable behavior and ask what support or agreement is needed for the next attempt.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring a piece of feedback that was hard to use. We will examine the difference between a verdict and an assessment. Save these questions.
