What can you contribute that the room is missing?

You notice something useful and keep it to yourself because no one asked.

An assumption to examine

A capability matters only when someone recognizes it.

Look at one ordinary moment.

You can explain a confusing handoff, but wait for an invitation while others struggle with it.

Observe before deciding.

Notice what people ask you to help them understand or do.

Choose one response to practice.

Offer one specific contribution and ask whether it would be useful before taking over.

Look back together.

Did your contribution serve their need, or your need to be recognized? Save this for your next conversation.