The Gift: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

You wait for recognition before offering a useful skill.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You assume an offer must become a permanent obligation.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You decide what someone needs without asking.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

A capability is visible but has no place to be practiced.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

You confuse contributing with carrying everything.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Choose one moment.

Notice what people ask you to help them understand or do. Offer one specific contribution and ask whether it would be useful before taking over.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring a capability you want to use more intentionally. We will look at who it could serve. Save these questions.