What are you helping build that other people can carry?

You value the community when it gives you something. What happens when it asks for your contribution?

An assumption to examine

Belonging means receiving what a group provides.

Look at one ordinary moment.

A useful team practice depends on one person because nobody has agreed to carry it together.

Observe before deciding.

Notice what you receive from the group and what you help maintain.

Choose one response to practice.

Choose one shared practice, ask who wants to help sustain it, and agree on a review point.

Look back together.

Who can carry this with you, and what have you agreed to contribute? Save this for your next conversation.