Build Something: what do you notice?

Five moments to examine with your team.

You show up when the group benefits you and withdraw when it needs help.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

One person carries the work of maintaining a shared practice.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Participation is measured only by attendance.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

No one knows how to contribute without taking over.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

A useful idea disappears when its first advocate leaves.

Describe a specific example before deciding what it means.

Choose one moment.

Notice what you receive from the group and what you help maintain. Choose one shared practice, ask who wants to help sustain it, and agree on a review point.

Bring the observation into the room.

Bring one practice worth carrying forward with other people. We will examine what it takes to build something together. Save these questions.